Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.On March 29, 1996, the President signed into law the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act of 1996 (SBRA), P.L. 104-121, 110 Stat. 857-874, Subtitle E of which for the first time established a mechanism by which Congress can review and disapprove virtually all federal agency rules (hereinafter Congressional Review Act or CRA). In its current form, however, the efficacy of the review scheme as a vehicle to control agency lawmaking through the exercise of responsible, effective and expeditious legislative oversight may appear to some observers to be problematic. On the other hand, several rules have been affected by the presence of the review mechanism, suggesting that the review scheme has had some influence. Among potential impediments to the law's full use, the scheme provides no expedited consideration procedure in the House of Representatives; there is no screening mechanism to identify rules that may require special congressional attention; and a disapproval resolution of a significant or politically sensitive rule is likely to need a supermajority to be successful if control of the White House and the Congress...
