Excerpt: .I wonder you are not ashamed of yourself, to have always the best of the argument, and to prevent your friend from ha. ving what she likes, without leaving her one good reason to find fault with you. All had gone to wreck and ruin, no doubt, had you left your husband, your family, and your lit. tie marmottes in the lurch for one week; it had been a wild scheme, to be sure; but I should have liked yon a hundred times the better for it; whereas, in aiming to be all perfection, you are good for nothing at all, and are only fit to keep company with angels. Notwithstanding our past disagreement, I could not help being moved at the sight of my friends and relations; who, on their part, received me with pleasure; or, at least, with a profusion of civilities. I can give you no account of my brother, till I am better acquainted with him. With a tolerable figure, he has a good deal of the formal air of the coun. try he comes from. He is serious, cold, and I think has a surly haughtiness in his disposition, which makes me appre. hensive for his wife, that he will not prove so tractable a husband as ours; but will take upon him, a good deal of the lord and master. My father was so delighted to see me, that he even left unfinished the perusal of an account of...
