Not illustrated. 1906 Excerpt: .and for a traffic of about 35 million tons, 2,759 cubic feet per second. Without such gates the figures will be 2,122 and 3,492 cubic feet, respectively. On page 167 of Part II of the documents supplied to the Board will be found a table giving the monthly volume carried past Bohio for fourteen years. As the flow at Bohio is about six-tenths of that at Gatun, the volumes at the former to compare with the above figures are 1,125, 1,643, 1,257, and 2,095, respectively. It will be found that in no single rainy month did the measured flow fall below that requisite for a traffic of 10 million tons. Even for 35 million tons, using the interior gates, there would have been shortages only in three of the fourteen years, amounting to 28, 32, and 4 cubic feet, respectively, and these are more than covered by the safety coefficient of about 10 per cent used in computing the gaugings. Without interior gates the shortages would have been larger, but this only proves the necessity of introducing them. It is very desirable to form a closely approximate idea as to the entire area of the basin above Gatun, with a view to check the above estimates for the low-water supply of the canal. The bounding crest of the Gatuncillo basin is laid down with precision on the best map extant, and I have carefully computed the area, finding it to be 158 square miles. Unfortunately the...
